

© A.T. Neubau

The theme of the wall, that is, of seclusion, was created by a close examination of the building styles found in a typical „road side village“ in Burgenland (Austria's south-easternmost province). This analysis led the architects to reduce the space to significant, defining elements, such as the dwelling space, the public exterior area and the private space of the courtyard.

The modified assemblage of these elements results in a structure that responds to the local topography at the same time as it mirrors the residents' needs and incorporates the use of passive solar energy. The openings in the two walls that form the outer hull of the house are defined by the location, the residents' habits and the possible vistas of the mountain and into the valley. The flow of rooms inside is dependent on and influenced by their specific use and circulation.

The structure is composed of three segments with different functions: a low structure situated at the front with the entry area, sanitary facilities and the garage; a vertical unit that functions as a joint and houses the stair case and the gallery; a north-south oriented, long main building, parallel to the slope that contains a living/dining area, a kitchen and a guest room on the first floor and bedrooms on the second floor.

benthouse

Leithaberggasse 5
7051 Großhöflein, Österreich

ARCHITEKTUR
HOLODECK architects

BAUHERRSCHAFT
Familie Köller

TRAGWERKSPLANUNG
Klaus Petraschka
Richard Woschitz

FERTIGSTELLUNG
1999

SAMMLUNG
Architekturzentrum Wien

PUBLIKATIONSdatum
21. Oktober 2001

© A.T. Neubau

© A.T. Neubau

© A.T. Neubau

benthouse

DATENBLATT

Architektur: HOLODECK architects (Susanne Schmall, Marlies Breuss, Michael Ogertschnig)

Bauherrschaft: Familie Köller

Tragwerksplanung: Klaus Petraschka, Richard Woschitz

Funktion: Einfamilienhaus

Planung: 1996

Ausführung: 1996 - 1999

AUSZEICHNUNGEN

Architekturpreis des Landes Burgenland 2002, Auszeichnung

© A.T. Neubau